BISHOP LAWRENCE ILL; FORCED TO REST

We Need Improvement
Extortionate Distribution
More Suicides
Imagination Is All

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1921.

The "market" was heavy. Speculators paid seven and a half for money with which to gamble. Foreign exchange heavy, almost "collapsed." London is pessimistic. More worry about the coal strike. England's workmen present a problem more difficult than was the German problem.

Judge Gary supplies a hopeful note. He believes things are getting better. They need to get better. If they don't get better soon, if government doesn't stop constant shipments of money from the United States, and persistent robbery of the people by profiteers, there will be troubles here not soon forgotten.

It is all very well to be optimistic, but not about combination burglary and incendiarism.

The price of oil drops so rapidly that Attorney-General Daugherty wisely stops drilling on lands controlled by government.

The price of gasoline seems to stay up, however.

The big trouble in this country is the extortionate, extraordinary cost of distribution. For instance, this writer, wanting to fertilize a farm, not managed for profit, buys a [illegible] fertilizer for thirty-two dollars a ton. A [illegible] dollars a ton [illegible]. No wonder it is hard to make a living, especially when the price of potatoes, that he raises, drops ninety per cent. in one year. Not twenty or thirty per cent., mind you, but NINETY per cent.

The prices in Chicago a year ago were $4.25 a hundred pounds, now they are 80 to 90 cents a hundred. That is what dealers pay. The public pays nearly the old price, thanks to our system of distribution, which robs the producer, robs the consumer and enriches the middleman.

The Reverend H. M. Warren, president of the save-a-life league, says suicides are increasing, especially among children. In 1920 a thousand more killed [illegible] than in 1919. Of tw[illegible] suicides 707 were children five to sixteen years old. Farmers' wives and "four hundred soldiers returned from service" are among the suicides. One lady killed herself because her husband refused to eat a pie she made. That was probably the last straw.

Imagination controls the mind and the eye controls imagination. Mrs. Nott, accused of killing her husband, sat calmly in court until the prosecuting lawyer said: "Bring in that trunk." Two men brought in the black trunk in which the dead man's body had been buried in a swamp. The accused woman screamed, went into hysterics. Court was adjourned. The eye SAW the trunk, imagination made a picture in the mind, then the hysterics. That explains moving pictures' success. You SEE them.

The New York Times says the London Times is sold. The late Joseph Pulitzer, asked what price he would take for the New York World, answered, deeply offended: "Brisbane, Brisbane, would I sell my gravestone?"

Northcliffe, who owns the Times, will sell his gravestone, and his right eye also, several times, before he will sell the Times. If the Times is sold Northcliffe is "busted"—and he is not.

When you talk of billions it doesn't mean much. When you say that today Germany will deliver in Paris twenty treasury bills, each bill worth ten million dollars, that means something. We all know the ten dollar bill. The ten MILLION dollar bill interests us. Germany must give twenty ten million dollar bills five times in succession to pay the first billion, and more than a hundred and fifty ten million dollar bills to pay her entire debt. War is costly.

Fat men that "cuss" and swear are usually honest, according to Mr. Withey, who represents a great bonding company; such fat men curse but do not steal. Married men are more honest than single men, because they don't want to disgrace their wives and children. SOME thin, non-swearing single men are honest, however; SOME fat men steal. Remember Bill Tweed and the Tichborne claimant.

By CHARLES E. PARKER

The forty-fifth annual intercollegiate track and field meet swung into its finals at the Harvard Stadium today, with the team championship very much up in the air.

California, Yale and Pennsylvania appeared to enjoy better chances than the others and seemed to have a clear advantage over Cornell, which was the pick of several track prophets.

The last named qualified men in but four of the eleven events in which trials were held, and, at least three

Mrs. Nott Saw Head Crushed

Mrs. Nott sketched in court at Bridgeport by an American staff artist on the fourth day of her trial for the slaying of George A. Nott.

Bridgeport, Ct., May 28.—"I did not see them hit him or shoot him. But I saw my husband's head crushed open and I had to get away. Elwood told me to go in there in the bedroom, and I went in there and stayed. He said he would fix everything up."

This part of her confession introduced in evidence is the heart of Ethel Hutchins Nott's protestation of innocence of complicity in the murder of George E. Nott.

On the fourth day of her trial for murder in the first degree in the same crime for which Elwood Wade was hung a week ago, the slender black-clad woman was so weak that she could not walk unassisted to her chair in the court room. Yet her composure was greater than on any of the previous days, and not once did she cry aloud.

Mrs. Nott's confession to the police on August 29, 1920, the day after her husband was beaten and shot and butchered to death [illegible] his body

He had trouble with her and left home, he said, later marrying Alma Constance Cornell, 21 years old, of No. 8 Wainwright street, Dorchester, who is about to become a mother. This marriage took place on July 17, 1920, the ceremony being performed by Edward J. Lord, clerk of the Municipal Criminal Court, who is also a justice of the peace.

VETERANS MASS ON COMMON

Attribute Schley's Transfer From War Risk Bureau to His Zeal for Wounded

"Keep Dr. Schley here!"

That was the slogan of the thousands of former service men and their friends who gathered on Boston Common today at the monster mass meeting called through the Boston American by local veteran organizations to protest against the arbitrary removal of Dr. W. S. Schley from his post at the War Risk Bureau to Washington.

Scathing denunciation of the treatment accorded Dr. Schley by departmental autocrats upon whose toes he has apparently trodden by his work for the men who were his "buddies" overseas, was made by the prominent speakers at the meeting.

Each reference to the doctor and to the work that he has been doing for former service men was cheered by the huge throng.

The speakers included George E. Wilson, chairman of the meeting and State president of the Ex-Service Men's Non-

Accused of marrying a truck driver at the South Boston army base although already wed, Mrs. Ada M. Murray, twenty-three years old, of No. 449 Broadway, South Boston, was arrested in Charlestown and is being held for the New Bedford police on the charge of bigamy.

Mrs. Murray was taken in custody by inspectors from police headquarters and members of the Charlestown police.

They charge that while she was married to Francis F. Murray, with whom it is alleged she lived on Elm street, Charlestown, she went to New Bedford and there wed Alfred Bourbeau.

Bourbeau, they say, is employed at the army base in South Boston.

BULLET KILLS HOTEL COOK

Parker House Employe Expires at Hospital; Police Hunt for Accused Man

George Simonds, cook at the Parker House, who was shot, supposedly accidentally, by Alexander Jointa, another kitchen employe, died at the Relief Station. Jointa, who ran from the hotel following the shooting, has not been caught. Two inspectors are searching for him. Simonds died as a result of a wound in his stomach. Before he died, the police say, he absolved Jointa from blame, saying that he was shot when the missing man was exhibiting his revolver.

Sergeant William Flynn appeared before Judge Wentworth and applied for a warrant charging Jointa with manslaughter. Flynn was advised by the court to wait until after the inquest.

BIG SHRINKAGE IN FRICK ESTATE

$50,000,000 Decrease in Value of Property Left by Late Steel Multimillionaire

More than $50,000,000 drop in the value of the estate left by Henry C. Frick of Pride's Crossing and New York is disclosed by the appraisal filed in New York.

The famous art collection of the Pittsburgh millionaire which was valued before his death at approximately $30,000,000, is now estimated by Roland F. Knoedler, the art dealer, and Sir Joseph Duveen, who made the appraisal, at less than $13,000,000.

At the time of the filing of the steel magnate's will Pennsylvania officials placed a valuation upon his securities and other property of approximately $143,000,000. That value has now shrunk to $92,883,766, according to figures filed by Henry C. McEldowney of the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh, one of the executors of the estate.

This means that bequests to charity of about $50,000,000 have dwindled to slightly more than $20,000,000.

The real estate holdings are valued at about $19,0000,000, while the personal property, including stocks, bonds, etc., are valued at about $49,500,000. Mr. Frick had cash on hand at the time of his death of approximately $707,200.

RICH MEN TRAPPED IN RAID

52 Bottles of Champagne at "House Party" Involved in Allen-Tufts Case

Details of the celebrated "chicken and champagne party" which figures in Attorney-General Allen's fight to oust District Attorney Tufts of Middlesex came to light today.

This party was held in "Lil" Kingston's Michawum Manor in East Woburn, the night of March 6, 1917, and was attended by a number of pretty girls, several motion picture men and a number of brokers.

Following the party, according to Allen's contention, $100,000 was extorted from the male guests to save them from prosecution, and it will be charged that Tufts assisted by threatening to indict them.

It is not alleged that Tufts got any of the money, but it is charged that a lawyer well known to him got most of the $100,000 as his "fee," and that the threat of indictment caused the men to "come through."

This lawyer, whose name enters the Allen-Tufts fight for the first time, once held a high public office.

DINNER WAS DULL.

The "chicken and champagne" party followed a more conventional dinner in a Boston hotel that night, attended by the motion picture men, the brokers, a former Mayor of Boston, an ex-Attorney-General of this State and others.

Finding the entertainment waxing dull, one of the motion picture men began painting a glowing picture of profits in his business and hinted he would like some feminine society to "make it an evening."

A young man who has since been identified as a "runner" for the lawyer, who was later mentioned in connection with the extortion, suggested Mrs. Kingston's place.

The party, minus the former mayor and an ex-attorney-general, started for "Lil's" in automobiles.

Mrs. Kingston, it is stated, had received a telephone message that a large party was coming, and when they arrived thy found various young women on hand, produced in som mysterious manner best known to the woman of the house.

52 BOTTLES OF CHAMPAGNE.

The motion picture men began to divest themselves of some of their superfluous cash. Among other things testified later, it was stated that fifty-two bottles of champagne were consumed by the thirsty party.

When the party began to get on a really free-and-easy basis, it is stated by those who ought to know, the "runner" left the room.

He went to a telephone. It is supposed he called the police. In any case, a squad of plain clothes men

W. C. DILLINGHAM DIES SUDDENLY

William C. Dillingham, clerk of Middlesex County Courts since 1911, dropped dead in his home in Malden. Heart disease was the cause. Green. In 1875 he was appointed a deputy sheriff of Middlesex. In 1882 he was made assistant clerk of courts and on June 22, 1911, became clerk.

"It seems to me that I do not violate my duty to the court, however, if I do call the public's attention to the fact that these charges against me were filed by the attorney general [illegible] the measures which he sought and which I opposed, were overwhelmingly defeated in the legislature.

"The public ought to remember, too, that when Mr. Allen was a candidate for attorney general he demanded my support, but, as a matter of fact, I supported another candidate. Since that time he has openly stated that he would pursue me to my destruction."

Tufts' reference to a political feud dates back to the time when Allen became a candidate to succeed Henry C. Attwill as attorney general and sought the Middlesex County prosecutor's support. Tufts and Melvin M. Johnson, who will defend him before the Supreme Court hearing, were political leaders in Waltham where both lived.

Allen is said to have presumed that he had the backing of Tufts, who, however, came out in support of Robert T. Bottomley, the former Good Government secretary, who was among the several candidates for the office.

Do Not Coddle Husband, Mrs. Barrett Advises

Here is some advice for girls considering matrimony.

It is given by Mrs. George Reed Barrett, wife of the Brockton bank man. Mrs. Barrett and her husband have each filed cross libels for divorce.

1—Don't marry a man who likes to go off with the boys. If you do, your marriage may develop as mine. Out of ten years of married life, Mr. Barrett's evenings at home would aggregate about eight months.

2—Don't try to be too good. I worked for six years of my married life. Instead of helping us both to get along, I hindered our marriage. Put the marital responsibilities squarely upon a man's shoulders.

3—Expect your husband to support you, entirely. The woman who charges on her husband's account the expensive gown often helps the success of her marriage. The woman who sews up any cheap little thing, to save him money, often hinders her marital success.

4—Insist upon your husband giving you share and share alike in his funds. Mr. Barrett, out of a $125 a week salary, gave me, at most, $15 weekly. The rest he spent on the boys.

5—Never marry a man who drinks. The man who takes an occasional drink when you marry him may keep on till all his sensitiveness and all his conscience is ruined by alcohol. It is his wife who suffers then.

6—Marry the man who likes to go off on vacations with you. If he prefers a fishing trip with the boys, let him have the boys for life. He will, any way.

THEATRE MAN IN $5,250,000 SUIT

Vaudeville Manager Charges Exchange Interfered With His Business

New York, May 28.—Charging that his exclusion from the floor of the B. F. Keith Vaudeville Exchange, which books attractions for vaudeville theatres of the country, has caused him financial damages of $1,[illegible],000, Max Hart, long prominent as a manager of vaudeville artists, has filed suit under the Sherman anti-trust act in the Federal Court here demanding triple damages of $5,250,000 and an injunction preventing interference with his business.

Named as co-defendants with the B. F. Keith Vaudeville Exchange are some of the leading figures in managerial circles, including Edward F. Albee, Frederick F. Proctor, Martin Beck and Reid Albee.

The Orpheum Circuit, Inc., and the [illegible] Collection Agency are also named.

In past years Mr. Hart has become known as a developer of vaudeville talent. Memorial Day

By HARRY B. METCALF.

The memories of years far-sped
Troop back into our souls today,
As on the graves of hero dead
Our countrymen their tribute lay—
The tribute of the Springtime's bloom
That men have moistened with their tears
For those who saved, in days of gloom
The heritage this hour endears.
Rest ye in peace, ye armies gone,
Our fathers, sons and brothers brave;
Thy tasks are done, thy glories won
In deeds that tower above the grave!

READY TO SEND TAX NOTICES

Second Quarterly Payment Bills on Incomes Soon to Be Mailed

The Internal Revenue Department has just completed preparations for sending out notices for the second quarterly payment of the 1920 excess profits and income taxes due June 15 and for which bills will be mailed at least 10 days before payment is due.

It is estimated by the revenue office that the collections for this quarter will reach [illegible], which is somewhat smaller than the amount received a year ago, yet the number of remittances will be 100,000, which exceeds that of the same period a year ago by several thousands.

Payments are due on or before June 15. Failure to comply with the requirement leaves the taxpayer subject to the penalty and fines imposed by the revenue laws.

A Versatile Girl

From slap stick comedy to the important role of Chichi in the photo adaptation of Vicente Blasco Ibanez' famous novel, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," now current at the Tremont Temple, is a wide gulf, yet Virginia Warwick, the beautiful actress who has created such a favorable impression, made her first appearance in a dramatic role when selected by Rex Ingram, the director, as the ideal type. Mr. Ingram first saw her face on the screen in a Sennett comedy, and after making a special note that she was the long sought type for the role of Chichi he sent one of his assistants over to the studio where comedies were being turned out, armed with a detailed description of the young lady he sought. When this means of locating her failed he went over to the studio personally and interviewed her with an idea of engaging her permanently. Contracts were signed and she began work in the role which called for a mixture of youth, beauty and coquetry, and later as the wife who scorns her maimed and disfigured husband. That Mr. Ingram made no mistake was evident when they had put her through but a few of the many scenes. Not only does Miss Warwick photograph remarkably well, but she is a capable actress and a most conscientious worker. Miss Warwick was born in St. Louis, Mo., in 1902 and she finished most of her education in Los Angeles, where she studied ballet dancing. Her skill as a dancer paved the way for her first engagement in Sennett comedies.

BANKERS DIFFER WITH HARDING

President Wants Foreign Loans Spent Here—Bankers for No Restrictions

Washington, May 28.—An insurmountable obstacle has been reached between the government and the international banking group in New York on the question of foreign loans placed in the United States.

Following the cabinet meeting, at which the matter was discussed, it became apparent that the banking interests represented at the White House dinner Wednesday night are strongly in favor of an unrestricted policy regarding foreign loans.

They expressed the belief to the President that any loan made to a foreign nation ultimately must find itself applied to purchases in America.

On the other hand, the administration is said to hold the view that a great deal of American money loaned abroad is expended elsewhere. It further believes that credits extended by the international banking group to the foreign governments should be expended in this country for the betterment of our industrial situation and the increase of our foreign trade.

Recently it was disclosed that money loaned to the British government was reloaned at higher rates of interest for the purchase of Mesopotamian oil rights to which American companies had a prior right. Later, investigation showed that a loan made to Belgium went to South America for the purchase of Argentine wheat, while American farmers have been unable to dispose of their surplus wheat.

The international group further expressed to the President [illegible] Federal banking board.

The financial leaders suggested to the President the removal of the [illegible] tax, and it may be stated that the President leans toward their view, but reserves a decision.

This is caused by the fact that a conference is being arranged in the near future between the President and bankers of the West and Middle West, who [illegible] an entirely different view of the situation.

DELAY IN NAVAL PROGRAM BLOCKED

Washington, May 28.—Consideration of the Borah amendment to the naval bill which would have suspended the building program for six months while disarmament negotiations were proceeding, was blocked in the Senate by Senator Poindexter of Washington, in charge of the measure.

Claiming the Borah amendment general legislation [illegible] inadmissible in an appropriation bill, the senator raised a point of order which was promptly sustained by Vice-President Coolidge.

PROBE OPPOSITION DENIED BY MINERS

Williamson, W. Va., May 28.—Charges that the operators of the Williamson-Thacker coal field, where a miners' strike has been in progress more than a year, have opposed the federal investigation proposed by Senator Hiram Johnson, are specifically denied in a statement issued by the Williamson coal operators association, through Harry Olmstead, acting chairman of their local committee.

Emergency Tariff Is Signed by Harding

Washington, May 28.—President Harding has signed the emergency tariff bill. The bill is effective for six months from the date of signature, and it aims to protect American farm products from the dumping in this country of low cost foreign goods.

The bill also contains a provision continuing the licensing powers of the War Trade Board with regard to dyestuffs for three months.

BLAIR MUST FILL MANY VACANCIES

Washington, May 28.—David H. Blair, new commissioner of internal revenue, today confronted a big patronage problem among other pressing questions, when he entered upon the duties of that office.

Commissioner Blair settled down for an immediate clearing up of appointments to hundreds of existing vacancies in important federal revenue and prohibition offices.

Prohibition Commissioner Kramer will tender his resignation today or tomorrow.

"Beauty Imprisoned"

Seena Owen as Anna Janssen in the prison scene of "The Woman God Changed," the great Cosmopolitan film now showing at the Colonial.

By ADA PATTERSON.

You should see "The Woman God Changed." Whatever else you fail to see in this week's amusement bill don't fail to witness that drama of a woman's soul at the theatre. It is a Cosmopolitan production.

You should see it because it comes close to the threshold of our own lives. It shows what might have been in many lives. Maybe in yours. Maybe in mine. Who knows what [illegible] of shame or grief or [illegible] may be left behind?

You should see it because it carries one out of a [illegible] of [illegible] into a far away Tahiti.

Because it shipwrecks a man and a woman and casts them on a strange island in [illegible] of tropic seas.

Because it brings them back to [illegible] civilization what years of living close to the earth and in communion with the arching sky dome and the serene stars have done for the shipwrecked man and women.

But most of all, since that is the deepest and highest interest of mankind, you should see it because through it pulses a great love. It is the measure of a woman's love for a man. It shows you and me what sacrifice, undreamed of by us, a woman may make for a man she loves.

It sounds a spiritual note, high and fine and sweet as an angel's song, for it depicts step by step, struggle by struggle, how a woman the world called bad went back to the white souled state of her babyhood.

It is a big picture of a big theme. When is there hope for a woman? How long may she fall and yet be lifted to [illegible] heights? These questions are answered in the photoplay, "The Woman God Changed."

The [illegible] of a [illegible] young dancer, she has begun a career that should carry her to the heights of fame and wealth. Comes love, the interruption. Anna Janssen falls faith[illegible] deep in love with Alastair De Vries, whose love for her is as shallow as his own selfish nature. Deceived, deserted, maddened by jealousy, she kills the man who broke her heart. She fled the scene and escaped to Tahiti.

There, a dancer in a cabaret, she is disturbed by the gaze of a man. In that tropic refuge of hers she has become accustomed to the burning, searing gaze of men. But this one watches her in a different way. He follows her graceful bends and flexes, her bows and dips, her gliding steps with a coldly analytical gaze. One of her admirers brings the stranger to her side and presents him. The stranger is as direct of speech and manner as of gaze.

"Janssen, I have come to take you back to be tried for the murder of De Vries," he says.

We see them on a vessel in the South Sea, the girl furious and reviling, the detective like the stars and the tides, implacable. A storm wrecks the ship and casts them upon an uninhabited island.

On that island the man and woman, the sea, the stars, and passing ships played a great drama of a soul. In the court room in the city whence Anna Janssen fled after the murder of her lover the detective told the story of what happened on the island. To a wondering judge and jury he told the story of the woman God changed.

The pictures tell well the wonder story. Dr. Frank Crane, the famous preacher writer, has written the titles. Which is a guarantee that they are brief and clear and of master strength.

I would rather have missed my dinner for a week, two weeks, a month, than not to have seen the unique photoplay, "The Woman God Changed." The picture is directed by Robert G. Vignola. Doty Hobart wrote the scenario from the story by Donn Byrne. Seena Owen and E. K. Lincoln played the leading roles. Others in the cast are: Lillian Walker, H. Cooper-Cliff, Henry Sedley, Paul Nicholson, Joseph Smiley and Templer Saxe.

HARDING NAMES COL. HAYWARD

EXPERTS NEEDED FOR ROADS

Rail Problem Is One for Engineers to Solve, Not Incompetent Bankers

By NORMAN HAPGOOD

Staff Correspondent of Boston American.

Norman Hapgood

Washington, May 28.—This morning's mail brings a letter from a railroad president, commenting on a recent article of mine, and suggesting that we meet and talk things over. Nothing could satisfy me better. The subject is too large and too difficult for bigotry. This letter says: "If your conception of the situation is right, then mine is almost wholly wrong, and I am anxious to be right. The railroad problem is too great a problem, and is too closely related to the general success and prosperity of the country as a whole, to be dealt with in any other way than the wisest possible way.

"I do not look upon the railroad question as defying solution, as you suggest, nor do I think there is anything at all mysterious about the situation."

MANY ROADS USELESS.

The President proceeds to say that the roads do not wish rates unduly high, or wages unduly low, and that railroad rates have advanced less rapidly since 1915 than other costs.

The President perhaps misunderstands me a little. I do not assert that the railroad problem is insoluble. It is not insoluble for the simple reason that it must be solved.

There is now in the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commission a report by Professor Ripley of Harvard dividing the railroads of the country into zones. This is being studied by the commission and will be made public in perhaps a month. As a month will come somewhere near July 1, when the interest on many bonds fall due, it will be a critical time.

Before the Cummings committee there has been talk of the impossibility of raising money for new mileage. Every railroad man knows, or ought to know, that there is needed less mileage, not more. Many useless and unprofitable roads must be scrapped.

CALL EXPERTS, NOT BANKERS.

Steinmetz has recently, so I am informed, made a statement about an enormous saving that could be made in the cost of electric lighting if proper advantage were taken of the fact that the electric peaks in different parts of the country come at different hours. Let Steinmetz be called by the Cummings committee and let the relation of that idea to the possibility of making railroads pay be worked out.

The truth is that the railroad problem is a problem not for bankers, but for engineers. Why are engineers not called before the Cummings committee? Why are not impartial experts called, notably those, well enough known to Senator Cummings, who have worked out a highly considered plan of unification? Does not every competent person concede that there is no answer without unification?

FALL RIVER MEN REJECT OFFER

Open Shop and 80 Cents an Hour Fails to Satisfy Striking Carpenters

Fall River, May 28.—The [illegible] wages of 80 [illegible] was rejected at a mass meeting of [illegible] carpenters following a[illegible] conference held between committees of the master builders and carpenters.

At the conference the master builders stated that they were ready to pay 80 cents an hour instead of 75 cents an hour as decided before the strike began May 2. Before the strike the union carpenters were paid a dollar an hour.

At a previous conference the carpenters announced they were willing to return to work for 95 cents an hour, but the proposition was rejected by the master builders.

When the master builders announced that [illegible] to pay 80 cents an hour, [illegible] representing the carpenters made the counter proposition that they were ready to settle the difference for 87½ cents an hour. The proposition was rejected by the master builders who insisted upon 80 cents and also the open shop.

Building Settlement Expected in Providence

Providence, R. I., May 28.—An attempt to satisfactorily adjust the wage dispute between the Building Trades Workers and Master Builders is under way here. The men have been out on strike since May.

A conference was held in the Superior Court here with the speakers and bricklayers present, Judge J. Jerome Hahn as arbitrator. It is believed that a settlement will be arrived at as the result of this conference and the men will go back to the jobs by the first of the week.

The Master Builders' Association was represented by President George R. Humes, Thomas F. Cox and Willard A. Lenz. The strikers' representatives were J. J. O'Hara, J. B. McMahon and P. F. McGrath of the union. The masters argued in favor of the whole cut from $1.05 to 92½ cents and hour, while the union argued for the former scale. It is expected that other unions of the craft will follow the lead of the bricklayers in the matter of adjustment.

Carpenters to Take Wage Cut

Following a conference between representatives of the carpenters' unions and the North Shore Building Trades Employers Association, union carpenters on the North Shore have agreed to accept a wage cut of 10 cents an hour. The rate will now be 90 cents per hour instead of $1. The cut was accepted conditional on a similar reduction being made in the wages of all building trades workers with the exception of bricklayers.

LONDON IGNORES SIMS' PRAISES

London, May 28.—The speech of Rear Admiral William S. Sims before the Pilgrims' Society, in which he attributed the credit for winning the war to the British fleet's control of the seas, and stating that laymen are disposed to give too much credit to the United States navy, attracted little attention here.

It is pointed out here that the views expressed by Admiral Sims in his speech Thursday coincide with his views as outlined in his book.

LEGION FAVORS BURSUM BILL

Washington, May 28.—Passage of the Bursum bill for the retirement of national guard, reserve and other emergency officers disabled in the World War on the same basis as disabled regular army officers was urged by spokesmen for the American Legion before the Senate military affairs committee.

STATE STREET TO BE OPEN MARKET

Despite protests from business interests on State street made at a recent hearing before the street commissioners, they have approved making State street from India street to Atlantic avenue a market where farmers will be permitted to sell their produce between 4 and 8 o'clock weekday mornings.

Mayor Peters approved the commissioners' ruling.

WOOD BLOCK PRICES DROP

Another proof that the high cost of material is on the decline was demonstrated when Mayor Peters approved the contract to the Republic Creosoting Company for furnishing the city with 100,000 wood paving block for street repairs, at $62.50 per thousand. Last year it cost the city $94 per thousand.

80,000 EXPRESS MEN FACE CUT

Chicago, May 28.—A reduction in wages for 80,000 employes of the American Railway Express Company was asked by the company in a proposal submitted to the United States Railroad Labor Board. The wage question will be given a hearing before the board June 6, it is understood. Shopmen are not included.

THIRD TITLE SET GOES TO 50

Checkers Have Passed Upon Total of 16,660 Lists in $5,000 Movie Test

With 4711 sets checked yesterday the best the Title Test checkers could discover was a third set containing 50 correct titles. This makes three sets with 50 Correct Titles each.

The latest contestant to achieve the 50-mark is of the sterner sex and resides in Vernon street, Brookline.

Yesterday's good work by the checkers brings the total up to 16,660. Participants, all of them anxious for the publication of the List of Winners, will please bear in mind that what we are discussing is the "first" checking. When that has been completed, the leaders will be "re-checked." A special list is being prepared of all who have 46 or more correct titles. These parcels will be checked a second time. Yesterday brought to light some additional 48s.

There are 26,860 parcels remaining. It is not impossible that the end of the "first" checking will be in sight one week from today.

NEW TEST OPENS SOON

Meanwhile, the Title Test Editor has received his sailing orders for the Songs of the World Test, which will be under way in about ten days. The titles will be titles of well known songs. In other respects, the new Test will be similar to the Movie Play Title Test.

With one very important—most important—difference. The new Test will be a $6,000 affair! Whether there will be two top prizes of $1,000 each remains to be determined.

The Title Test Editor hopes that all who took part in the Movie Play Title Test will remain over for the Big Show. When Test Picture No. 32 appears, in a day or two, you will know his secret. You will be "onto" Mr. Artist. You will be "back stage." You will know how the thing is done.

If you fell down on the "easy ones" which have appeared up to date you will not like the unveiling which takes place with the re-printing of No. 32. Thus far, the work has been easy, except for those who would not believe their eyes. The Test began with No. 32. With the appearance of that one we were "sent to the dictionary" for the first time. Those who understood the theory of the thing went to the dictionary. They were determined to find out what all these titles really meant. They found out!

ONE TITLE THAT FITS.

Once the Songs of the World Test is under way the Test Editor will have little time to discuss the Movie Play Title Test. For that reason, he wants to give a few lines today to three participants who have written to him on the subject of Test Picture No. 2.

All three objectors—they are reasonable and good natured about it—contend that "Witness for the Defense" is not the best title because there is nothing in the picture to prove that the Witness has been called by the Defense.

Please remember, dear objectors, that there is "one title in this list that fits the picture better than any other title in the list."

Nowhere in the List is there any such title as "Witness for the Prosecution."

Everybody admits that we have in this picture a WITNESS and that in reply to a question he says he is the most intimate friend of the prisoner, or DEFENDANT.

Now, there being no such title in the list as "Witness for the Prosecution," why should anybody have looked further than the listed title, "Witness for the Defense."

One writer favors "Less Than Kin," which might apply if the witness were asked: "Are you any relation to the prisoner?" He wasn't asked that question!

TITLE SELECTED FIRST.

For the last time, permit the Test Editor to explain that the TITLE was selected BEFORE the picture was drawn. This was true every time. It will be true in the Songs of the World Test. The pictures were made to order. In every case the artist was working with the Correct Title in front of him.

Today's picture, No. 27, presented little difficulty.

Correct Title—"All Wrong."

HARVARD BEGINS STORE SURVEY

Comprehensive Study of Cost in Conducting Business Gets Under Way

The first step in a comprehensive study of the cost of doing business in department stores has been taken by the Harvard Bureau of Business Research, known among business men for the studies of the shoe, hardware, grocery, jewelry and other trades which it has already undertaken.

Professor Melvin T. Copeland, director of the bureau, sent to a selected list of department stores a schedule, drawn up in accordance with the tentative plan of the standardization committee of the Controllers' Congress, on which the stores were asked to report their figures for 1920.

This information will be used for teaching material in the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, and will also be placed at the disposal of the trade. The investigation has been financed by the National Retail Dry Goods Association to the extent of $5,000, on the ground that a study of the trade will be of value to department store managers as well as assisting in the educational work of the Harvard Business School.

MRS. EATON GOT LOVE LETTERS

Norwich Man Wrote Them, She Says on Stand in Court at Alfred, Me.

Alfred, Me., May 25.—Mrs. Mabel L. Eaton, testifying in her divorce suit against Benjamin F. Eaton of Boston, declared that she had seen Gertrude Vaughn, her husband's private secretary, sitting in his lap.

Mrs. Eaton names Miss Vaughn as co-respondent.

Under cross-examination, Mrs. Eaton admitted receiving letters from a married man, expressing love for her, and addressed to her in her maiden name. She also admitted that Leroy Henderson, whom her husband names as co-respondent in a counter suit, had ridden from Boston to Wells Beach, Maine, with her, but denied that he had stayed at her cottage.

Mr. Eaton testified that his first quarrel with his wife was concerned with a man who wrote love letters to his wife.

Chicago Wife Again Mistress of Her Home When Order Splits Triangle

Chicago, May 28.—Mrs. Fred Jurish is the mistress of her home again. A court order sent her invalid husband to the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium and his soul-mate, Miss Marguerite Jariabka, has been ousted from the house.

Ever since last Christmas the trio with the three Jurish children have been living together. The two women attended the needs of the invalid. Mrs. Jurish took care of her husband during the day and his affinity looked after him at night.

RULED HOUSEHOLD.

And during the last five months Miss Jariabka ruled the household. She ordered the children to call their father "uncle" and his wife to refer to him as "brother."

Also she supported the entire family by working in a factory all day. It was Jurish's wish that his affinity should rule the house.

The triangle developed five years ago when Jurish deserted his family and fled with his pretty soul-mate.

WENT HOME TO DIE.

Then he became ill. He was told he would die. He wished to be at home when the end came. So last Christmas he and Miss Jariabka returned to his wife and children.

And so they lived in this strange fashion until a few days ago when Miss Jariabka ordered Mrs. Jurish and her children from the house. They went to police headquarters and filed a complaint.

MONTREAL WINS RIGHT TO BOX LYNCH

WINS FROM HERMAN BY SHADE

Former Champion Made Great Rally in Ninth Round, but Failed to Score Kayo

By JACK CONWAY

Young Montreal, sturdy Providence bantamweight, won the right to a bout with Bantamweight Champion Joe Lynch when he trounced Pete Herman in a ten-round battle at the Faneuil A. C.'s show at Braves Field. Montreal has already defeated Lynch in a no-decision contest, but should now receive consideration in a match where a decision can be rendered.

Here abilities a [illegible] ring generalship gave Montreal a [illegible] over Herman. In the [illegible] Montreal was on the [illegible] knocked out. In [illegible] a sensational [illegible] the [illegible].

Herman fought a [illegible] gruelling battle, but [illegible] advantages. After [illegible] with heavy blows to the head and body, [illegible] was too crafty to be caught at the same time [illegible] by [illegible].

* * *

The ninth frame was filled with enough thrills to last an entire season. When this chapter got under way, Montreal had a slight lead. Herman apparently realized this for he made a mighty surge for a kayo. The former bantam king drove terrific left and right hand punches to Montreal's head and body. The Providence battler reeled under the power of Herman's blows. He staggered against the ropes and it looked as though he was going to fade out of the picture. Monty, however, refused to hit the canvas. He kept shooting out his left and bobbing his head around like a bail on a rough sail. Meanwhile Herman made drastic efforts to put over his famous right flush to the jaw, but without results.

The terrific pace told on Herman and he tired. Monty then came out of his stupor and fought back gallantly, scoring several times with his left in the closing part of the round.

* * *

The bout was a toss-up as the rivals left their corners in the tenth frame. It was a sure thing that the boxer who grabbed the honors in the final stanza would receive the award.

Herman was anxious to continue at the same clip he had traveled at in the ninth frame, but he had shot his bolt. He had used up his reserve strength and was unable to do any effective scoring in the last round. Montreal, on the other hand, had recovered his bearings and walked forth and piled up enough points to earn the honors in this session by a comfortable margin.

* * *

Herman started in the first round like a winner. He scored repeatedly with left hooks, while Montreal was fortunate to land with a couple of light jabs. Monty appeared very nervous in this frame.

It was a different story in the second session. The [illegible] boy hopped about at a lively clip and grabbed the blue-ribbons as was the case in the third chapter.

* * *

Herman landed with heavy body blows in the fourth stanza and did not experience much trouble in finishing in front. The fifth round also saw Pete win the honors as a result of his socking power to the body.

Montreal stepped out of the cloud in the sixth round and outpointed his opponent by a four to one margin. Herman was merely in there. That's all. The seventh was even, while Montreal had the best of things. Then came the last two frames as described above.

* * *

Larry Sweeney was referee, while Peter Kelley and Mike Winston acted as judges.

* * *

Billy Duffy of Everett won over Jack Schorendorf of Milwaukee in the semi-final of eight rounds.

Battling Downey, Roxbury welterweight, bested Al Sears of East Boston in another eight-session affair, while Sam Bell of the South End bested Thomas Early of Lawrence in eight frames.

* * *

The show went over big as far as spirited fighting and the attendance was concerned. There were 12,000 fans on hand for the main bout, which is a new attendance record for New England.

THIS IS THE MOST REMARKABLE PHOTOGRAPH ever taken of Earl Thompson of Dartmouth College, Olympic and American champion hurdler, clearing the obstacles in his specialty race. It is both athletic and photographic perfection. Not a flaw is to be seen in Thompson's form as he reaches the height of his flight across the hurdle. Arms, legs and body are in perfect unison, all set to clear the bar with the least possible clearing and ready to resume the sprint on landing without any lessening of speed.

of the seven men so qualified did not appear capable of sustaining the pace that was expected in the final running of their events. Consequently Cornell's one chance of annexing the meet could come only through "all-Cornell" finishes in the distance runs today, and there did not appear to be a sufficient number of Ithacans of quality to stage such celebrations.

But Few Upsets in Trial Events

But few upsets to the Boston American's forecast, and those were minor ones, came in the trial heats and qualifying rounds. The shot putters, whose marks, unless improved, will carry as finals, finished in exactly the order tabulated in the American's chart; all the 100-yard dash, 220-yard dash, 880-yard run, 120-yard hurdle and hammer throw performers listed in the chart qualified with ease. In the 440, however, Monie, the Syracusan who recently defeated Frank Shea, failed to land a qualifying position by inches; in the low hurdles Drew of California, who defeated Wells, last year's champion in their dual meet, did not place; in the broad jump Courtis, the New York University star who qualified for the recent Olympic team, showed poor form and was nosed out. Reid of Brown also fell in this event, while in the high jump Wilcox of Stanford and Jordan of Dartmouth, both of whom have done 12 feet or better this season, failed to qualify at 11 feet 6 inches.

The more noteworthy performances in the trials were the 21 2-5 seconds made by Alan Woodring of Syracuse in his 220-yard; the 157 feet 4½ inches hammer throw by George Dandrow of Tech, and the one minute 57 1-2 seconds half-mile trial by Larry Brown of Pennsylvania. Harvard's team gave many a surprise in qualifying the greatest number of men, but several of the Crimson athletes seemed destined to be eliminated when the semi-finals in the dashes and hurdles were run today.

Penn Performers Show Up Well

The work of the Pennsylvania team was really more sensational, as in no instance did a wearer of the Red and Blue fail to deliver a high class performance. Harold Lever qualified in the century, Box Maxam won his heats in both the 220 and 440-yard dashes and made the best time of the day in the latter. Earl Eby came through in the 440 and 880-yard events in like manner; Larry Brown ran the speediest half-mile of the day in winning his heat, and was expected to show in the mile run today. Smaller had little difficulty in qualifying in both hurdles, and in addition F. A. McFadden and J. W. Temple, two relatively unknown Pennsylvanians, got into the finals in the 220-yard dash and pole vault, respectively.

Yale Has Men in Eleven Events

California, with ten qualifiers, equalled Penn's record, and distributed its men in nine events, whereas Penn's men showed in but seven. Californians who appeared for today's semi-final and final rounds were Hutchinson in the century; Hutchinson and Hendrixson in the furlong; Hendrixson in the 440; Sprott in the 880; Henderson in the low hurdles; Muller in the high jump and broad jump; Norris in the pole vault and Majors in the hammer throw, and as the result California still was in a position to win the meet in the event of slip-ups on the part of either Pennsylvania or Yale.

The Elis landed representatives in seven of the eleven events in which preliminaries were run. Feldman landed qualifying places in the century and furlong; Campbell and Salmons qualified for the 880; Landon was a finalist in the high jump; both Gardner and Rogers were finalists in the pole; Jordan qualified in the shot put and Hudson in the hammer throw.

Penn State was next in order with eight qualifiers, which, in view of the general impression that intercollegiate rules would militate against the appearance of "Happy" Hile, proved a surprise. Hile, who is a transfer student, was allowed to run, and his performance in both hurdles indicated that Penn State would add several points to its prognosticated total. However, the bulk of Penn State's strength is in the timber events—three men qualifying for the low hurdles and two for the high—so it has little chance of figuring with a heavy total of points.

Princeton, Cornell and Leland Stanford were next each with seven qualifiers, but several of their respective representatives barely managed to qualify and seemed doomed to drop from sight in the final running of the events.

The elimination of Jordan in the pole vault militated against Dartmouth's chances of proving the title-getter, for Dartmouth started today's numbers represented in but five events—Earl Thomson having qualified for both hurdles, Brown for the high jump, Shelburne for the shot-put and Weld for the hammer throw.

CARNIVAL OF GRAPPLERS

All-Star Session of Mat Men at the Arena on Holiday Night

There will be a big all-star wrestling carnival at the Boston Arena next Monday night under the direction of Promoter [illegible].

Renato Gardini, Italian lion, will clash with Earl Caddock in one of the finish matches. Stanislaus Zbyszko, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, will oppose [illegible] Dailey of New York in the other tussle.

It is one of the best all-star cards that could be arranged. It should furnish action from start to finish.

Caddock is one of the world's best grapplers. He has met every man in the world of note and has always given satisfaction.

Gardini likewise is a fast, clever wrestler. His last contest with Caddock was a sensational affair and Monday night's contest is expected to be every bit as fast.

There is also considerable interest in the meeting between Zbyszko and Dailey. Zbyszko is the wonder athlete of the world. At the age of forty-two he won the heavyweight championship of the world. And he intends to cling on to his laurels.

Reservations may be secured at Room 1140, Little Building, or at the American House on Hanover street.

ENGLISH HIGH WINS REGIMENTAL MEET

English High scored the greatest number of points in the field events of the out-door regimental championships at Tech Field yesterday, and East Boston scored heaviest in the district meet.

Two new intermediate records for the district meet were established by Trade School boys, Vasconcellos doing 18 feet 9¼ inches in the running broad jump, Johnson clearing 9 feet ¾ inches in the standing broad jump.

The regimental meet scores: English, 34 points; South Boston, 29; Trade, 17; East Boston, 2¾; Commerce, 11¾; Dorchester, 11½; Latin, 10; West Roxbury, 9; Brighton, 8; Hyde Park, 6, and Charlestown, 2.

The district school results: East Boston, 38½; South Boston, 27; Brighton, 10¼; West Roxbury, 9; Brighton, 8¼; 18½, and Charlestown, 2.

CARD SYSTEM TO BAFFLE THIEVES

All the yacht clubs of Dorchester Bay following the theft of boats from several organizations, have formed an association to secure, in co-operation with the police, more efficient protection for their fleets. A card system containing the name of each boat and its owner has been devised, and duplicate lists have been given to the police authorities.

The clubs in the new association include the Columbia, the Mosquito Fleet, the Old Colony, the Severn Hill, the Dorchester, the Neponset Valley and the Milton. Police Captain T. J. Dilworth of the South Boston Club has been elected chairman and Frederick Gross of the Mosquito Fleet Club, secretary and treasurer.

NO HOLY CROSS-PENN STATE SERIES

Worcester, May 28.—The Collegiate baseball championship, mythical though it may be, will be undecided this year. It will probably be a disputed honor between the supporters of Holy Cross College and of Penn State. An effort was made to have these two teams meet, but it has failed. Penn State will not meet Holy Cross either in one game or a series, it was announced today. The Penn State team intends to disband after it has completed its present schedule.

MEDBURY

Crime is decreasing and the highwaymen and stickup guys are becoming more gentlemanly and polite. They always take your hat off before they tap you on the shell with iron sleeping powder.

They use nothing but the finest grade of sand in their sand bags.

They don't like to muss you up, so they hit you over the head and comb your hair at the same time.

Most of them wish you pleasant dreams before they spoil your hair comb with their twelve-inch nut cracker.

They take all your jewelry and money so that nobody will come along and steal it from you while you're unconscious.

Some of them are very considerate and try to knock you as near to a hospital as possible.

They want you to enjoy it as much as you can, so they rap you on your funny bone with a laughing-gas pipe.

The blow from some gas pipes hurts so much that it feels as though it still had the stove attached to it.

Many a man walks the streets because he suffers from insomnia. Then a holdup chap comes along and cures him.

A refined burglar never calls his window opener a "Jimmy"; he refers to it as "James."

While a "Jimmy" is an American instrument, it speaks the French window language.

Whenever they hit you it hurts them more than it does you and they wear a mask so that you can't see the pain on their faces.

They usually go to their jobs in a machine; they get used to automobiles from riding in the police patrol so much.

They're like a doctor; they make a good many of their professional calls in the evening.

But they don't like to have you wait up for them.

Unlike most society people, they wait until their host has gone to bed.

While they don't like policemen, you often see a burglar walking along with one.

They don't have calling cards, but their name is written on their gas pipe and they emboss it on your skull.

Wall Street Doesn't Fix My Price

It's a lot of fun to do business when you've got the right policy and the best quality at the lowest price, and I believe the confidence of the Public that I now enjoy is due to the fact that for the last twenty years I have had ONE POLICY, ONE QUALITY, and ONE PRICE.

You remember that last September I anticipated a drop in Fur—dropped my price, swallowed my loss, and sold at cost and knocked the false bottom out of a fictitious fur market.

At that time, Hatter's Fur was quoted at $13.50 a pound. You can buy it now for $5.75 a pound. Before the War it cost $1.50 a pound—and I don't blame the Rabbits for the jump from $1.50 to $13.50. I think it was Wall Street's influence on the Fur Market.

But Wall Street doesn't run my business, or make my hats. While Wall Street was busy manufacturing rumors, I was busy making hats. While Wall Street was full of gloom, my stores were full of Happiness and Hats. When I took the lid off the price, the sales jumped up.

Last year I crowned the heads of more than a million satisfied customers. All my stores, individually and collectively, did more business than any year in their history.

This year, from January 1st to May 1st, we laughed at the so-called "Business Depression," and sold more hats than we did last year.

From May 1 to date this year we more than doubled the business for the first three weeks of May last year.

SAME THING HAPPENED IN STRAW HATS.
The break in the price of Rabbit Fur in Australia last Fall was followed by a slump in the straw braid market in Japan this Spring.

When I started to make straw hats for this season, the best quality of straw braid was selling at $1.10, and a number of manufacturers bought at that price. I knew the market would break, and waited until it dropped to 40c, and then jumped in and bought more as it went lower. So don't blame the retailers around town who are charging all kinds of prices for the Quality that I am selling at $2.85. They're not profiteers—they're simply victims of early buying. They bought at the top, I bought at the bottom. And my good fortune is yours.

As Kipling so aptly expressed it:
"They asked me how I did it.
And I gave 'em the Scripture text:
'You keep your light so shining,
A little in front o' the next.'
They copied all they could follow,
But they couldn't copy my mind,
And I left 'em sweating and stealing,
A year and a half behind."

OESCHGER GOES ON HILLTOP

Boston Twirler Opposed by Nehf; Decision at Plate by O'Day Settles Third Game

By NICK FLATLEY

[illegible]

Any team that casually forgets a seven-run lead owned by the enemy and keeps pegging away until nothing but a rather frapped decision at the saucer keeps one-seventh of that margin intact, is worthy of earnest consideration.

The Braves made the finest uphill struggle that has been lamped in these parts for a long period, and manufactured friends of all the five or six thousand spectators who remained through nearly three hours of the most scrambled baseball imaginable.

* * *

[illegible]

* * *

Picking the hurlers today was a tough job for both managers. Joe Oeschger was ready to start the opener for the locals, with Artie Nehf in line for the Giants. But after that, it was a [illegible]. The remaining [illegible] have almost all been blasted off the hill during the past few days.

The Giants have a fast and dangerous ball club, but they will have to [illegible] before they can hope to breeze past the flying Pirate outfit.

* * *

Rumor has it that the Giants are getting ready to trade Rapp, Benny Kauff and a pitcher for Heinie Groh of the Reds. The present third baseman doesn't live up to his name, though he's a sensational fielder.

* * *

Catcher Frank Gibson has now [illegible] gleefully to the sagger on his pinch-hitting occasions, swung his war club and sent base knocks scattering over the orchard. His latest was a stout hearted triple that chased Bill Ryan off the hill in a hectic eighth inning uprising.

Frank appeared for the first time batting left-handed and, incidentally, made the best hit of his uproarious recent career. He has just about manufactured a modern record, and is as popular with the supporters as any member of the Brave team.

With three backstops performing as O'Neil, Hennery Gowdy and Gibson, Frank see the Wigwammers are the best looking club in the league back of the dish.

Young Braxton looked like a real pitcher, and is due to get a start very soon. He had the Giants breaking their backs, fishing for an extra wide curve, and showed plenty of courage for a young man making his large league debut.

The story of the ultimate inning is very sad, but interesting. The Braves had dynamited the seven-run lead, but were still two casual counters shy. Captain Billy Southworth saluted big Toney with a triple, under the guns in the ninth.

Cruise slashed a single over second, and one run was needed to tie. Antonio Boeckel crashed a long liner to left centre. Walker ran back, made a brilliant stop and started the ball in. Bancroft relayed it to the plate. The ball and Cruise arrived about the same time.

Umpire Hank O'Day called the Brave out, being the only party in the ball yard who saw things that way. It was one of those close ones where the runner is supposed to get the edge, if there is any, but never does, when the Giants are the other team.

Boeckel was so interested in the play at the plate that he remained on first, and almost came to blows with the whole Giant team. Had he gone to second, this would be a different story, for Holke followed with a long hit to centre. Tony got to third, and then went to the clubhouse when Bancroft pulled a double play.

CARPENTIER HAS A CHANCE

The man who says Carpentier has no chance to beat Dempsey talks nonsense.

On form the American figures to win, and win easily easily. But form is frequently upset. The history of the prize ring is filled with surprises.

Carpentier is not an invalid, or a cripple. He is young, has plenty of strength and health. He has shown that he can knock out a man if he hits him.

He seems to have courage, which is the main requisite.

Put any courageous man in good physical condition in a ring with another man and he has a chance to win, even if he doesn't know the first rudiments of boxing.

The odds are against him, of course, but he has a chance. Many a fight has been decided by one lucky punch. If Carpentier, confident of his punch, should step in and begin trading smashes with Dempsey from the sound of the gong on July 2, the heavyweight championship of the world will follow the Goddess of Fortune.

Silly persons run around blatting that the Frenchman hasn't the ghost of a show, but Dempsey, wise now in the ways of the ring and familiar with its shaky fortunes, shows how much attention he pays to such talk by his training at Atlantic City.

He knows and his manager, Kearns, knows that he must carefully prepare for this fight. Dempsey knows that any man, with physical conditions equal, has a chance against another man any time they get together in the ring.

He remembers that many persons said he had no chance against Morris, against Fulton, and finally against Willard. He knows it if he has read the history of his calling that few believed Jim Corbett had a chance against Sullivan.

Carpentier is fresh from victories over Beckett and Levinsky.

Those who say his opponents were of no account should remember that the same thing was said of Willard before he met Jack Johnson.

TIGERS NOT TO ROW BEATEN NAVY EIGHT

Philadelphia, May 28.—Navy's challenge to Princeton for another race between the varsity eight-oared crews of the two institutions cannot be accepted, according to John Fitzpatrick, assistant coach of the Princeton crews. Princeton defeated the Navy eight, Olympic champions, on Lake Carnegie three weeks ago. "There is not a possible chance of another race," said Fitzpatrick. "That crew isn't even going to Poughkeepsie. The boys are behind in their studies, and we decided some time ago that the crew would not row again this season."

Hunter is a small, slight-built man but he [illegible] a fine golfer and he settled down at once to the business in hand and by dint of a brilliant [illegible] which sent him to 33 [illegible] out in the morning, one under par, gained the amazing lead of 6 up without [illegible] once having left his opponent an opening.

* * *

Conditions suited the new champion perfectly as one could not help noticing by the oddness with which he executed all his shots and the [illegible] with which he began his initial effort. On the other hand, Graham lacked confidence. His father, who lives close to these links, was at death's door and Graham felt, so I am told, and as everyone who knows him believe, that his place was elsewhere than in this match.

* * *

Hunter proved himself a fine golfer during this tournament, one capable of splendid work under opposite conditions. He was going well up until the final on a course as hard as a billiard table and as tricky as a fortnight of sun can make golf greens. Then, within a day, facing absolutely opposite condition, wet and cold, his play retained all of its steadiness.

Golf News and Notes

By ROBERT E. HARLOW

Interest in international golf competition will continue next week, when the British women's championship is held at Turnberry, Scotland, with Miss Alexa Stirling, American champion, and Miss Cecil Leitch, British champion, meeting in the first round Monday.

Other golf events are the Yale-Harvard team match at the Rhode Island Country Club Monday, a meeting of the Women's Golf Association at the Country Club Tuesday, the French amateur championship starting Wednesday.

Senior golfers have been invited to play in a seniors' tournament at the Woodland Golf Club Wednesday, June 1. The play will be 18 holes stroke competition, and is open to golfers fifty-five years and more. Club handicaps will govern. There will be a special prize for the "veteran" division open to golfers of seventy years and more. It is expected that a permanent seniors' association will be organized. A. H. Bean, George J. Marff and Julius Mathews are the Woodland committee in charge.

Tom Cunningham and Dan Horan will open their Flag Tavern Country Club links, in Weston, on Monday. The nine-hole course is in playing shape. It will be open to all golfers who may play by paying a daily greens fee.

After all the stars, American and British, had fallen by the wayside in the amateur championship at Hoylake, William Hunter, a postoffice clerk at Deal and sons of the greens keeper for the Deal Golf Club, came through and won. He was one of about fifty artisan golfers who entered the championship for Britain. Golf is more democratic there. The largest number of public links players ever entered in the American amateur championship was three.

Kearns Fears Dempsey May Go Stale

By SID MERCER

Atlantic City, N. J., May 28.—The process of tuning up Jack Dempsey for the June campaign has progressed so rapidly that Manager Kearns is beginning to put on the brakes. Kearns has today cut the "Sampson" down to five rounds of boxing and after the first of next week will eliminate the sparring exhibitions for a time.

He's too ready right now to suit me," said Kearns as he watched the champion brush it with Bull Montana in a comedy finish to his day's work. "Remember, we have another month to go," he yelled at Dempsey.

"All right, Doc," the big fellow replied, "but if you toss me in this ring I can't act as if I'm handcuffed."

"I'm going to hide those gloves next week and give you a little vacation," promised Kearns.

Only two sparring partners exchanged slaps and raps with Dempsey Friday. Leo Houck, after a three-day rest, was fresh enough to give the champion some annoyance with stinging lefts that made him snort and bore in. Houck paid dearly for the liberties he took, however. Jack Renault, the big Canadian, also worked with Dempsey, taking him on in alternate rounds with Houck.

"I told Jack not to mix it today," volunteered Kearns, "and that's the reason he is just stalling along." If Dempsey was just stalling along, Houck was probably glad he was not in earnest.

"So many people are flocking out here," Kearns rambled on, "that I do not want to disappoint them. I will send Jack through light workouts for the next three days and then lay him off. He's too far along already. I'd like to see him as he is now, say about June 25."

Martin Burke of New Orleans, who reminds everybody of Bob Fitzsimmons, has not yet started sparring with Dempsey, as one of his ears, recently injured, is still giving him trouble.

FAST CARD FOR BIKE RACE

Piani Favored Over Clark in Sprint at the Beach Oval

An international flavor is attached to the 40-mile motor paced team race tonight at the Revere Cycle Track. Frank Keenan of Revere and George Wiley of Syracuse, representing this country, will oppose Jules Miquel of France and Charlie Ver Kern of Belgium.

In the big sprint event tonight Orlando Piani, champion of Italy, and recent conqueror of Frank Kramer and Al Goullet, meets Jackie Clark of Australia, a well known and popular figure around the racing game for the past 15 years.

The sprint race between Piani and Clark is attracting great interest among the fans. Clark always has been noted for his jump at the finish but Piani is quite capable in this respect, too.

Other professional and amateur events will also be held tonight.

DEMPSEY NEEDS HOT WEATHER

Deschamps, He Worries Because Carpentier, Eat, Eat, Eat

By TAD.

Manhasset, N. Y., May 28.—"Starters ready, timers ready!"

"Well, they're all ready but the Arena and the referee."

The writer can't think of any other big heavyweight battle where the time seemed to hang so heavy on the hands of all concerned as at this one.

Down at Atlantic City Jack Dempsey is waiting for one week of hot weather. One week of it and he'll be set. Here at Manhasset Georges Carpentier and his peppery manager, Descamps, wake up each morning and hope that the calendar has skipped a week or so.

Descamps is as nervous as a cat on a hot griddle. He can't understand those long days. His body is ready, everything is ready but "Les jours sont trop longs."

"George, he is ready to box in one week," piped Descamps, puffing on a Maids of Virginia pill. "He is eat a lot of meals and he is just exercise now for the appetite," he continued.

"One week with those bag, those gloves, those road run and Carpentier he is ready for la boxe. He is such a long days this week. I wake up the morning! ugh! He is only Friday and I wish him Sunday. George, he eat, eat, eat. He box some, he skip those ropes some, then he some more. Too much eat. He is long days in May and June. Carpentier he is champ on those hit. He nervous ready for Dempsee. I wish Rickard change those date three weeks ahead for the fight. Ah, I'm so happy then. Carpentier he's so happy, too. He has not so long for the ring of the bell."

HARVARD AND YALE TENNIS TEAMS MEET

New Haven, Conn., May 28.—Harvard's tennis team opposed Yale here today and looked like a loser. The Crimson was without Captain de Turenne. Williams and Captain Bundy looked like Yale winners.

Harvard vs. Princeton

Princeton, N. J., May 28.—The Harvard nine faced Princeton here today in the second game of their annual series. The Crimson, a winner of the first game by a wide margin, was anxious to bring the series to a close, so Eddie Goode was sent out to try and tie another knot in the Tiger's tail. Jeffries will probably pitch for Princeton. The line-up:

JACK WILL EASE UP VERY SOON

Dempsey Does Not Care to Take Any Chances of Going Stale Before Big Bout

By JACK DEMPSEY
Heavyweight Champion of the World

Copyright, 1921, by King Feature Service.

Atlantic City, May 28.—With two weeks of steady training gone by, Doc Kearns and I have decided that it would be best for me to ease up a bit on work.

The next three days will be heavy ones for me and I intend to do more work on those days than I have done so far. I am in such great condition now that I may find it necessary to lay off work altogether for a part of next week.

I can't afford to take any chance of going stale. I believe that I could, if necessary, be ready to put up the best battle of my career within a week or ten days. Every muscle in my body feels as free and supple today as they did when I entered the ring against Willard at Toledo. I also seem to pack more power in my punches. My footwork, so everybody tells me, looks better than ever.

Began Day's Work With Five-Mile Walk

This was another blistering day and I started it with a five-mile walk. The day was so warm that I came in dripping wet. I loafed around most of the morning and trimmed my secretary-trainer, Teddy Hayes, at cribbage. Early in the afternoon my scribes came out to stage their seventh baseball game with the fighters. I pitched for the fighters and Doc Kearns tossed them over for the Writers. We lost again, 21 to 18.

Just as we were finishing the game Captain Bob Roper, the Chicago heavyweight, showed up, so we rushed him into a soccer game. The captain insisted on wearing his new Panama and in about five minutes the hat was a wreck. These soccer games are tougher than a fight.

Williams Lays Off to Let Eye Heal

Larry Williams was forced to take the day off to give his eye a chance to heal. The gash I opened in it yesterday was worse than it seemed at first. But he'll be back in a day or so ready to work.

I took Renault for two hot rounds to start proceedings. The Canadian was wearing a brand new head guard that saved him many a damaging wallop. I started on him rather easily, but warmed up in the second round with left and right hooks to body and jaw. Renault came back at me strong and landed a few on my own account. Whenever he landed a punch the crowd gave him a big hand.

Gil Hatfield Dead

Hoboken, N. J., May 28.—Gil Hatfield, shortstop of the New York Giants in the late 80's, is dead here as result of heart failure. He was the first man to ever throw a baseball more than 400 feet and his record stood until it was beaten in 1895 by Lejune's toss of 122 feet, two inches.

GEORGES BOXE IN PUBLIC

Three Score Persons Get Pa the Barbed Wire and Watch French Champion

By Universal Service

Manhasset, L. I., May 28.—Georges Carpentier boldly stripped away the veil of secrecy that up until now has covered his training work, when he hopped into his open-air ring before a large and critical crowd of spectators and went through a full workout.

Despite the vigilance of Francois Descamps and the Long Island "co[illegible]" assigned to the Carpentier camp, at least three score persons swarmed through the barbed wire barriers and into the space surrounding the ring. Included in it were several fashionably gowned women, who cheered the idol of the Paris prize ring.

Boxes With Italian Joe Gans and Mascot

Seemingly unmindful of the crowd and his own expressed aversion to public workouts, Georges boxed two rounds with Italian Joe Gans. When Gans, exhausted by the pace set by the flying Frenchman, was dismissed, "Battling" Henri Marcot, the sparring partner-chef, was called forth as a substitute.

Perhaps it is because "Battling Henri" cooks so well those dear lamb chops that Georges was kindly to him. At any event he remained strictly on the defensive with Henri calling upon the warrior cook to rain blows upon him. Henri would lash out wildly at Carpentier, who stood on one spot, a la Young Griffo, but not one of the [illegible] intended blows reached its mark.

After the round of this work Carpentier took on Marcot for three minutes of wrestling and went to the barn gymnasium for another half hour's work.

The Wild Goose

STORY UP TO DATE

Francis Manners, an architect and artist, is doing some special work in California while his beautiful wife, Diana, and their small son, Tam, are in the East. He gets a letter from Diana and wonders what she is doing in town, as they had agreed to keep Tam in the country during his absence. He [illegible] an old [illegible] on the train who relates the legend of the wild goose, which, after losing its mate, never mates again. Manners looks forward to surprising Diana and Tam. On arriving in New York he telephones to their place in the suburbs, only to find Diana is in town. Tam [illegible] answers the phone. Diana [illegible] with her when she [illegible] Francis. They go to the country and Francis endeavors to make Diana tell what is worrying her. [illegible] [illegible] puts him off. He finally discovers the truth and after several [illegible] which have an effect on [illegible] he consider giving her a divorce. [illegible] [illegible] and Diana [illegible] will give her grounds for a divorce.

"PEOPLE take these things all the time," said Diana. She would not have confessed [illegible] the thought that Manners [illegible] to be technically unfaithful [illegible] had the power to hurt. Manners shook his head.

[illegible]

Diana deeply resented [illegible] Manners was going to be unfaithful to her, but she could not have analyzed her [illegible] would have sworn that she [illegible] a tinge of jealousy, but it is probable that she had. She was more married than she knew, and had a higher conception of marriage as an institution than she would have confessed.

Break Was Tragic

Not even Tam knew [illegible] break with Manners was almost as tragic to her as it was to him. It is probable that intellectually she could not have offered [illegible] excuse for what she had done. And it is probable that in her heart [illegible] for Pene was neither an excuse nor a [illegible] may have been [illegible] in an average decent-minded human being who at last, under [illegible] of torture, consents to [illegible].

Some characters, as the history of religion [illegible] are stronger than the strongest [illegible] but the average church [illegible] would [illegible] his God at the [illegible] of the thumbscrew.

Diana's character was in the making. It had its strength, but as a whole it was not yet so strong as love. It was as if love said to her: "Don't try to justify yourself, my dear; trust me. I will give you not only the happiness to which every woman has a right, but I will give you justification [illegible]. When all those who love you see how happy your choice has made you they will be happy, too."

After the Return

Immediately after the return from Combers Manners had said to Mrs. Langham: "We were in plenty of time. But there is no use butting into a stone wall. I have surrendered. I have thrown up my hands. I have promised to furnish grounds."

"In New York State?"

"Yes, Mrs. Langham." His words were a cry of bitterness.

Aside from Mrs. Langham he did not even tell Mary Hastings what he proposed to do. He would have given everything he possessed if he had not made that promise to Diana. And he even felt a certain resentment toward his Cousin Peter for suggesting that he make it.

For once Peter, from the highest motives, had given him bad advice. But though his soul writhed in revolt he meant to keep his promise; and he was too proud to ask Diana to release him from it. Sometimes there was a look in her face which made him hope that she would release him of her own accord.

That he might after a time find real diversion and inspiration to better work in sowing the wild oats that he had never sown sometimes occurred to him. But such thoughts had no power to convince.

It was hard for him during these days to be natural with Tam. He had committed himself to doing the child a great wrong, and it was not easy for him to look into the adoring and steadfast eyes. He seemed by some divine institution of childhood to realize that his mood could have no gaiety in it, and she reflected his mood.

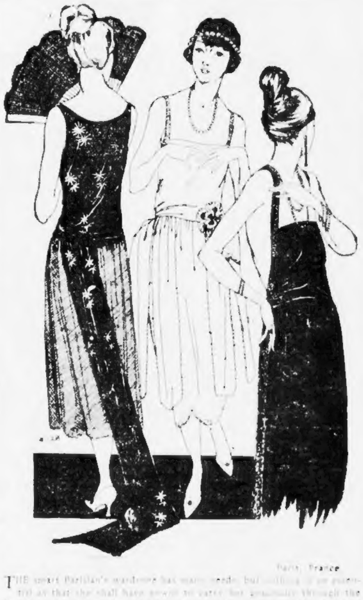
Fresh From Paris



Paris, France

THE smart Parisian's wardrobe has many needs, but nothing is so essential as that she shall have gowns to carry her graciously through the dinner hour and beyond. And the three models, worn recently at one of the fashionable Paris restaurants, served this end with distinction. The gown at the left has the wrapped bodice that has been so popular this season, of [illegible] and [illegible] and a panel-train of the fabric extends down the side back into a train. The simple gathered skirt is of silver cloth. The silver lace fan has mother-of-pearl sticks.

The centre sketch is of a girlish white taffeta frock, having its perfectly plain [illegible] and supported over the shoulders by taffeta straps [illegible] with crystals. A [illegible] of [illegible] panels of the taffeta [illegible] about the edges makes the bouffant [illegible] skirt, and the underskirt, also of taffeta, is scalloped and the scallops edged with crystals. A scarlet poppy with crystals [illegible] like dewdrops on its petals blooms at the waist.

The new treatment that Paris is according sequin bands is the feature of a third pleasing model. Bright green and blue changeable taffeta—for taffeta is well liked this season—is given bands of [illegible] green sequins for shoulder straps, which continue down each side of the corsage and skirt. The wrapped bodice is cut decidedly lower in back than in front and there is a slim double train of the taffeta edged with sequins. Long earrings—so long, indeed, that they sweep the shoulders in some cases—are the fad just now, and these sketches are [illegible] of this extreme style.

Do You Have Play Time?

By Loretto C. Lynch

"SHE is out walking every afternoon—I can see her from my window while I am still [illegible] of washing dishes or doing the thousand things my house requires. [illegible] don't know how she does it. She must neglect her home terribly."

Thus wailed a tired little housewife to me the other day as together we watched a charming young woman wheeling the baby and enjoying the spring air. Was her home neglected? Not a bit. For she was a born manager.

She had a home only large enough to serve her needs, furnished with a view toward making it easy to keep clean. [illegible]

Bell Rang

As she finished washing her cup and saucer a bell rang. She had learned the meaning of the bells in the establishment and promptly pressed the button releasing the latch of the lower door. She had no idea who the caller might be and was aware of a thrill of curiosity as she waited for the noise at the buzzer at the entrance to the apartment.

When it sounded she hastened to open the door. She started [illegible] and stifled an exclamation of consternation when she saw who stood there.

It was Daniel Sloane.

He was still puffing from his ascent of three flights of stairs, and his expression of countenance was not happy.

"I am glad to find you in," he greeted his niece. "I hope you are alone."

"Yes," she replied faintly. "I am alone."

"Good," he grunted, entering and hanging his hat on the rack. "I must talk with you. I suspected that your friend was lying when she said you would be out this morning."

A Weak Defense

"Mother loved perfumes," Helen began in weak defense.

"Dainty perfumes, perhaps," the man admitted. "But such things cost more than a trained nurse has a right to pay for them if"—significantly—"her salary is her only income."

But Helen did not appreciate the implied sneer.

"I don't know anything about Elizabeth's income," she said. "I suppose she may have a little money besides what she earns."

"That is not what I mean," her uncle remarked. "But we will let that pass. What concerns me is the environment in which I find my sister's child. I have come this morning to voice my last protest. I am under no obligation to do this—for you have set at naught all my wishes. But I am willing to give you one more chance to change your mind."

"About what?"

She did not look at him as she asked this question. Instead, she gathered up Elizabeth's clothing and toilet appurtenances and carried them from the room. When she returned her uncle answered her query.

"About this insane idea of earning money here in New York away from all the people you ever knew," he explained. "It has caused unfortunate comments in your old home and has placed me in a most disagreeable position. I have been asked some embarrassing questions [illegible] willing to [illegible]

The Rhyming Optimist

By Aline Michaelis

I DO not care for money, my thoughts soar far above [illegible] regions bright and sunny, where nothing counts but love. I would not be a miser and count my shekels o'er; indeed, I think it wiser to charge things at the store. I cannot save a [illegible] to purchase bread or meat; I'm in a pretty [illegible] when making both ends meet. Some people are appalling, a cold and heartless crew, for cash they keep on calling, when I have not a sou. I always need my luncheon, my breakfast and my tea; some dinner, too, to munch on, looks mighty good to me. For dollars I've no craving, nor can I hoard my pence; but still, the milkman's raving and still he talks expense! Oh, earth seems very heartless whatever way I turn; my attitude is artless, for gold I never yearn. The butcher will not heed me, but vows that I'm a fake, and adds: "You cannot bleed me; your talk won't pay for steak!" Yet, all condemn the fellow who is a profiteer; they claim that he is yellow and greet him with a jeer. The miser, too, is flouted; folks like him not a bit, and so I never doubted that I would make a hit. How greedy and how shocking, the money-grabbing mob, but hark! the landlord's knocking and I must get a job.

Why He Failed

Editor (to applicant for situation): "But I advertised for an office boy, and you are a man of six feet."

Applicant: "I know, sir; but I am literally starving, and would be quite willing to do an office boy's work for office boy's pay."

Editor: "No, I'm afraid you won't do. You see, I am a very bad-tempered man, and am in the habit of venting my spite on my office boy by kicking and cuffing him, and—well, I don't think you'd do. Good day."

A Pencil Clock of Paris

Paris is a city of curious clocks. Perhaps the most original one serves as the signboard of a pencil manufacturer, who aimed, as the map on the clock shows, at conquering many markets. This clock keeps good time, despite its square face and the necessarily rectangular arrangement of the hours, which are formed by pencils arranged as Roman numerals. You can see this clock on one of the main boulevards, high above the head of foot passengers. It has been constructed on a very big scale, so as to be clearly visible from the street.

A. R. J.

Let us hear how you earned your first dollar in a not more than 100-word letter to Magazine Editor, Boston American, 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

A MOTHER'S EXPERIENCE

West Buxton (Me.)—Read of Mrs. Arthur Campbell's painful experience. "I am a mother of five children. My little girl two years old was so sick with fever she lay just as if she were dead for two weeks. I started giving her Dr. True's Elixir and she began to gain at once. Now I would not be without it. I feel very grateful to you."

No doubt this child had some stomach trouble due to worms. Scores of children have worms and their mothers don't know the trouble.

Common symptoms of worms: Deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, sour stomach, offensive breath, itching of the nose and rectum, dry cough, grinding of the teeth, little red points on the tongue, slow fever.

Dr. True's Elixir has been faithful in its duties as a family laxative and Worm Expeller since 1851. Advertisement

Achievement

One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

What is the human mind's greatest achievement is a question that opens the flood-gates of one's imagination, and the first thing we think of is invention, but that [illegible] came as an inspiration.

I think the greatest achievement of the human mind was the mastering of thirty-four languages by Elihu Burritt, most of which was done while he toiled as a blacksmith. For years he had to continually bring to bear the highest accomplishment with which the human race has been endowed, the power of concentration.

JOHN E. O'MALLEY,

Clinton, Mass.

Give us your idea of the greatest achievement of the human mind in not more than 100 words and address Magazine Editor, Boston American, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

ECZEMA ON FACE CUTICURA HEALED

Spread On Hands. Itched and Caused Disfigurement.

"When I was six years old I had eczema on my face and it spread on my hands. A spot would break out and then a hard scale formed. It itched so that it often caused sleepless hours and also caused disfigurement.

"I saw an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. I bought more and when I had used three cakes of Soap and one box of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Alice G. Fruin, Lyonsdale, N. Y.

"TABS" FINDS KINGDOM

It was inevitable that following a world-wide inundation of war literature, the peace settlement and reaction should be reflected in an influx of after-the-war books. Few of the latter are so interesting, or reflect so truly the effect of readjustment on personal life and character as Coningsby Dawson's "The Kingdom Round the Corner," brought out by the Cosmopolitan Company. Those familiar with Mr. Dawson's previous work already knew that he could do nothing badly; they read his war works with admiration and respect, knowing that he saw and knew whereof he wrote at first hand on the fighting front. This novel is his first since the Armistice.

VALET IS HIS RIVAL.

"The Kingdom Round the Corner" is Lord Taborley's creed. It is what he believes is waiting for every man and that every man must so best himself that when he finds his kingdom he will be fit to enter it. [illegible]

How to Avoid Injury Done by Unwise Preface

If we must have prefaces, let us take them at the end.

Who wants a comment on [illegible] in his hand before he has read the text? Who wants [illegible] apology for the defects of the person to whom he is just being introduced, before he has had a chance to make acquaintance and gain impressions for himself? The objection holds true of all introductory remarks, whether by the author or some literary eulogist.

"I want you to meet Mr. Blenkinsop. He is extremely witty, has traveled a great deal, and has three charming children who take after their father. I regard him as the best read person I know. When he tells you about his experience in the tropics—"

"For heaven's sake, let Blenkinsop speak for himself!"

Let the book likewise speak for itself. If it is brilliant, the reader will find it out; if dull, a fulsome introduction will not make it any better. If its humor be labored, its narrative tedious, its characters unreal, to say that the text is bright, interesting and true to life will only awaken the reader's hostility when he finds that he has been deceived. Let him find out these things without priming his mind with false impressions in advance and he will not resent them so keenly. If on the contrary the book lives up to specifications, the intrusion of another mind between the reader and the text takes all the zest out of his discovery.

But put the comment last and see how much better it fits. If the reader has enjoyed the book, he will then enjoy confirmation of his opinions. If on the other hand he has not cared for the book, he is never bothered with the introduction at all!

UNFAMILIAR QUOTATIONS

The poignancy and anguish of youth in love is the best thing in the world.—Holloway Horn: "Harlequinade."

LITTLE CRUSADER SERVED RICHARD

Another "Little Cousin of Long Ago" has come to join the series, by Evaleen Stein, which now numbers about a dozen volumes. In "Our Little Crusader Cousin of Long Ago" (The Page Company) is the story of an English page who accompanied King Richard the Lion-Hearted on the third crusade. An introduction, very simply phrased, supplies the story of the crusades to youthful readers, and with the landing of Richard and his troops near Acre for the siege of that city, the personal narrative of little Hugh begins. Throughout the volume runs the strain of chivalry, of high courtesy between foes which the world seems to have lost in 1914. The story is good entertainment for little folk, and has several illustrations by Charles E. Meister.

AUTHOR-TRAVELER HAS LONG NAME

"By Nile and Tigris," a narrative of journeys in Egypt and Mesopotamia on behalf of the British Museum, is the recent work of a gentleman who rejoices in the name and title of Sir Ernest Alfred Thompson Wallis Budge.

TELL KIDDIES TO BEHAVE

"When the nose needs the ministration of a handkerchief it should be given as unobtrusively as possible." When one reads the above in a book on etiquette one's first inclination is to laugh. The laugh dies in the throat, however, when one thinks back on the almost hourly exhibitions of bad manners, bad taste and bad temper which one encounters in his daily commingling with the human race. There can be no doubt about it. There is a place in the world for Delia Beaddy's "Young Folks' Encyclopedia of Etiquette," recently issued from the press of Doubleday, Page & Company. A huge circulation for it is a consummation devoutly to be wished.

"DISARMAMENT SUNDAY" JUNE 5

Wilmington, Del., May 28.—The appointment to the position of chancellor, the highest station of the State bench, was refused by United States Senator Josiah O. TREATY TO GIVE FIUME TO ITALY

Rome, May 28.—Both the city and harbor of Fiume will be definitely annexed by Italy by force of an agreement with Jugo-Slavia, which is to be signed before June 1, it was reliably learned here today. Jugo-Slavia is to annex Portobaros by the same agreement, it is stated.

BRITISH DOUBLE IRISH ARMY

50,000 More Troops to Be Sent Reveals Despair of Effecting Truce

London, May 28.—The government has decided to double the strength of the British army of occupation in Ireland, which now numbers 55,000 regulars.

All the available men in English garrisons will be immediately drafted to [illegible] Dublin, Cork and other disturbed areas, until a further 50,000 are quartered in the country.

This decision, announced by the Evening News, shows that Premier Lloyd George has made up his mind that the Home Rule act has not advanced the settlement of the Irish problem and that it is idle to expect that the opening of the Parliaments will lead to a truce.

Social Head Makes Plea for Lonely Girl Students

Lonely women, living in hall bedrooms, without any recreation and often tied to their work by long hours, were discussed before the girls' conference at the Twentieth Century Club by Mrs. Eva Whiting White, head worker of the Elizabeth Peabody House, who made a strong plea for pleasures and entertainments for them.

"These persons come to Boston to work and are hopeful for a time with their surroundings, but they want something more than mere work to keep them going," said Mrs. White.

"We must get at these lonely souls and be [illegible] and interests [illegible] community where [illegible] to brighten their lives [illegible].

"Hospitality is wanted for these students who come here and find that after their studies are finished for the day they have no social relaxations and the companionship of young men, a privilege which they would enjoy in their own homes.

"It would be a splendid thing for those who can do it to open their homes for social festivities to the students who may be in their immediate neighborhood."

WANTS NORTH SHORE ROAD AS MEMORIAL

LOWER GAS FOR CHARLESTOWN

Cut From $1.35 to $1.30 Per 1,000 Feet Ordered in Effect June 20

The price of gas in Charlestown, and in a small section of Somerville will be cut 5 cents per 1,000 cubic feet on June 20, as the result of a decision made by the Public Utilities Commission.

The Charlestown Gas and Electric Company, supplying all Charlestown and certain mains in Somerville, was ordered to reduce its price for gas from $1.35 per 1,000 cubic feet to $1.30. This action was taken by the commission as a result of a petition of a large number of Charlestown residents.

Predicts Changing Of Metals Into Gold

Baltimore, Md., May 28.—Work on radium has reopened the question that base metals can be changed into gold, according to Dr. Ira Remsen, professor emeritus of chemistry at Johns Hopkins University.

"It is probable that many workers will experiment in this field, and it is fair to predict that some time some one will succeed," he said.

MOONEY LOSES LATEST FIGHT

Judge Refuses Writ That Would Have Freed Alleged Bomb Thrower

San Francisco, May 28.—Thomas Mooney has lost his fight for a writ of audita querela.

The former Pacific coast labor leader, whose case has attracted international attention, sought to obtain his release from San Quentin where he is serving a life sentence for alleged participation in the 1916 preparedness parade bombing through invocation of one of the rarest proceedings in legal history.

Judge Louderback of the Superior Court sustained the demurrer to the writ interposed by the district attorney on the ground that the writ could not be used to obtain release in criminal cases.

Not Class War but Co-operation

In That Way Only Can Labor and Capital Progress

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Before leaving for an industrial trip to Europe the vice-president of the New Jersey State Chamber of Commerce, Charles D. Freeman, of Newark, said something worth quoting:

> I feel that only by securing the co-operation of employes through their labor organizations, where such are in operation, or through systems of plant representation, where employes are unorganized, but only by developing expert administration of the personnel, can American employers hope to build a stable industrial house and save America from the fortunes that have befallen some European nations.

Immediately following the armistice we had the "open shop" campaign, in reality a war on labor unions.

It has embittered a situation which would have been difficult enough at best, in view of the hardships of inevitable deflation.

Neither organized labor nor organized capital can win, or could long hold control of American industry. Employers' associations, if they obtained unrestrained power, would never be better and often would be worse than labor unions with unrestrained power. Either one is intolerable as autocrat.

The policy of co-operation, to live and let live, will restore health and activity to trade. A class war—no matter which class is on top—destroys both spiritual health and material prosperity.

Fortunately the passions of war are cooling, here as well as abroad. The sober second thought is coming pretty fast among foresighted Americans, be they employers or employed. Time cures us of our griefs and hatred.

In a world turned topsy-turvy we cannot get back to normal by keeping up avertible strife. The voice of wisdom everywhere is now proclaiming in the famous words of Grant:

"Let us have peace!"

What Motor Cars Have Done

And What Airplanes Are Likely to Do

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

It is estimated that automobiles last year carried nearly five thousand million passengers in the United States, or four times as many as were carried by our railroads.

The freight haulage by motor trucks, a business just beginning, was half the haulage by rail.

This competition between the gas engine and the locomotive is one reason why railroad stocks are weak and why the future of railroading under private ownership is precarious.

Spokesmen for railway executives have, indeed, asked the people to charge tolls against automobile traffic in protection of private investment in railroads—an absurd request, but showing how much the railway executives are scared.

More distantly looms another competition—the airplane. Its use for commercial transport has been small here, but in Europe it is gaining rapidly upon rail travel.

It took twenty years for the automobile to catch up with the fast express. The airplane has a dozen years of grace in which to beat its land-going twin.

It Is Censorship of the Press

Governor Cox, when he signed the moving picture bill, made the following comment upon it:

> . . . Much has been said in opposition to the bill that it is the first step in the direction of general censorship of the theatres and of the newspapers, but I do not so regard the measure.

Why does the Governor not regard the bill as a step in the direction of general censorship of the theatres and newspapers? He gives his reason:

> While many of the producers of films have made an honest attempt to regulate the business on their own initiative, yet they have been unable to suppress many films which do no good, have no artistic merit and which have been obscene, indecent, immoral and inhuman. The producer of good films is now to be protected from low competition, and all should join in an endeavor to make it possible for moving pictures to be of greater service than ever in giving clean entertainment and instruction.

It is notorious that things are permitted on the legitimate stage that would not be permitted without censorship in moving pictures. This is so notorious that it needs no proof. Therefore, the Governor refutes his own statement when he alleges that the censorship of exhibitions which are immoral in the moving pictures is not logically a step towards censorship of theatres.

So also he refutes his own argument with respect to newspapers. The Christian Scientists, among the most intelligent and earnest of our people, believe very strongly that the newspapers ought not to publish stories of murder and violence. A large proportion of our community believe that stories like the Stillman divorce suit ought not to be published. Senator Chamberlain, voting for the moving picture censorship, said that if he had his way he would censor the publication of divorce cases in the newspapers. A large body of very sincere, high church clergymen do not believe that the newspapers or books or magazines should publish any scientific discussions which are inconsistent with the account of the origin of man and of the world generally given in the Old Testament.

Gentlemen on State street and Wall street, who are in a habit of controlling Legislatures, would be almost unanimous in the belief that the editorials of this newspaper and of all other newspapers which undertake to defend popular rights and interests ought to be censored, and they would have them censored, too, if the principle of censorship could once be established, for it is very much easier to control a body of newspapers through the power of bureaucracy than to buy them in fee or to lease their conscience from time to time as they are obliged to do now.

The Governor may believe that it is right to sign the moving picture censorship bill, but he certainly cannot believe that it is not a step toward the censorship of the press and of the theatre.

But worse than all this is the fact that it actually is the censorship of the press, for, with respect to the power of the newspapers which are protected by our Constitutions guaranteeing the freedom of the press, the moving picture is as much a newspaper as is the combination of pictures and jokes which appear on the fifteen or twenty sheets of paper commonly called "newspapers."

Dr. Schley's Removal

Upon the face of the situation the removal of Dr. W. S. Schley appears to be a great wrong not only to Dr. Schley himself, but to the veterans whom he has most faithfully and efficiently served.

If there is no other reason for Dr. Schley's removal than has so far been given he ought to be restored to office and an apology given him by the government, which owes this wounded veteran much as a veteran and as a faithful servitor of other unfortunate veterans.

Dr. Schley's friends are doing well to insist upon his reinstatement.

-:- Grief -:-

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

As the funeral train with its honored dead
  On its mournful way went sweeping,
While a sorrowful nation bowed its head
  And the whole world joined in weeping,
I thought, as I looked on the solemn sight,
  Of the one fond heart despairing,
And I said to myself, as in truth I might,
  "How sad must be this sharing."

To share the living with even Fame,
  For a heart that is only human,
Is hard, when glory asserts her claim
  Like a bold, insistent woman;
Yet a great, grand passion can put aside
  Or stay each selfish emotion,
And watch, with a pleasure that springs from pride,
  Its rival—the world's devotion.

But Death should render to Love its own,
  And my heart bowed down and sorrowed
For the stricken woman who wept alone
  While even her dead was borrowed;
Borrowed from her, the bride—the wife—
  For the world's last martial honor,
As she sat in the gloom of her darkened life
  With her widow's grief fresh upon her.

He had shed the glory of Love and Fame
  In a golden halo about her;
She had shared his triumphs and worn his name;
  But, alas! he had died without her.
He had wandered 'n many a distant realm,
  And never had left her behind him;
But now, with a spectral shape at the helm,
  He had sailed where she could not find him.

It was only a thought, that came today
  In the midst of the muffled drumming
And funeral music and sad display
  That I knew was right and becoming;
Only a thought as the mourning train
  Moved, column after column,
Bearing the dead to the burial plain
  With a reverence grand as solemn.

Europe's Recovery Our Big Problem, Says Hoover

HERBERT HOOVER believes the recovery of Europe from the ruin of five years of war is the most important problem in the world today, and, therefore, the most pressing problem before the United States.

The Boston Sunday Advertiser presents tomorrow Mr. Hoover's ideas on world reconstruction, as given to Hayden Talbot, widely known as a writer and interviewer.

A parity of prices, wages and profits is the most desirable condition which can be brought about in the United States, the Secretary of Commerce declares, and it is only by this means that the "worst situation since the close of the Civil War" is to be remedied.

Mr. Hoover, however, sees light ahead for the commercial and business interests of the United States and Europe.

"If Germany and Austria are not admitted to the League of Nations they will form an alliance against the League, the latter being reduced to a Franco-British Alliance. Whichever side the United States should favor would preponderate."

This is the European situation, as summed up by Guglielmo Ferrero, famous Italian historian, who has written an exhaustive summary of Old World politics for the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

A young Harvard astronomer has discovered that man and the earth he lives on are 1,000 times smaller in comparison with the rest of the universe than they have always been thought to be.

This same star gazer, by the aid of one of the largest of telescopes, has pushed our old sun and all the planets from the centre of the universe and removed us from the grandstand far out onto the bleachers about 350 trillion miles from the centre of things.

Other wonderful discoveries made by Harvard's latest astronomical calculations include stars that beat and pulsate like great luminous hearts.

Letters to the Editor

Cost of Veterans' Funerals

Editor Boston American:

Recently Senator John J. Carey of Dorchester introduced an order in the Senate the purpose of which was to get contributions from the State toward defraying the funeral expenses in connection with the burial of veterans of the world war. This order was referred to the Committee on Rules. No action has been taken on the order by that committee.

I would like to call your attention to the necessity for State contribution in this matter. The expense of a military funeral, to which these men are justly entitled, ranges closely to $100, $40 of this amount is for automobile hire in transporting a firing squad to and from the funeral, $15 is expended for floral tributes, $30 is expended for a suitable, permanent bronze headstone, to permanently perpetuate the memory of the deceased and $15 or $20 is expended for other details.

The order purposes to assist the various military organizations who have men to bury. One post in particular, the All-Dorchester Post, of which the writer is the adjutant, has forty-eight bodies en route from France, all of whom must be given at least minor military rites during the funeral ceremonies, and has not the money necessary to provide this same.

I am calling this to your attention because I realize that your publication will immediately see the necessity for prompt legislative action on a matter as important as the matter covered by the pending order and will assist this most worthy cause in the best way possible.

WM. J. COUGHLIN,
Adjutant, All-Dorchester Post, American Legion.

Subway Station Names

I notice that practically every subway station of the Boston Elevated has two names, one for the north-bound trains and the other for the south-bound trains, such as Friend-Union, Boylston-Essex and Winter-Summer. In order that confusion may be avoided in the public that use the Elevated, don't you think that it would be best to have one name for every station. For example, call the Friend-Union station either all Friend street station or all Union street station.
